Course Objective and Key-takeaways from the course

Till recently, marketing emphasized only the external customer. However, gradually it is being understood that external marketing is most successful when integrated with marketing efforts inside the firm. Internal marketing is a key activity in the development of a customer-oriented organization. The purpose of this course is to provide an understanding of the vitality of internal marketing, to highlight the relationship between internal and external marketing and to provide students with the skills to develop internal marketing strategy for firms.

This course aims to develop students' knowledge and understanding of the fundamental importance of Internal Marketing and provide a contemporary view of the subject. On successful completion of this course, the student should have:

1. An understanding of the concept of internal marketing
2. An understanding of the impact of internal marketing upon the external marketing activities of a firm.
3. The ability to identify and develop successful internal marketing strategies for firms.
4. The skills necessary to understand their place in the firm within the internal marketing framework and work as an effective internal member of a firm.
6. Developed generic skills in the areas of communication, problem solving, and critical evaluation.
